RE: Last Trading Day for Expiring VIX Futures

At 3:30 p.m. (Chicago time) on Wednesday, July 22, 2015,¹ CBOE Futures Exchange, LLC (CFE) will begin listing CBOE Volatility Index (VX) futures contracts that expire on a weekly basis instead of once a month. Trading in all expiring VX futures expirations ends at 7:00 a.m. (Chicago time) on their Final Settlement Date.² Trade at Settlement (TAS) transactions are not permitted in the expiring VX futures contract after 3:12 p.m. (Chicago time) on the day before the final settlement date for that contract.

(Updates CFE Information Circular IC14-063)

¹ This is the start of trading for business day, Thursday, July 23, 2015.

² The Final Settlement Date for a contract with the "VX" ticker symbol is on the Wednesday that is 30 days prior to the third Friday of the calendar month immediately following the month in which the contract expires. The Final Settlement Date for a futures contract with the "VX" ticker symbol followed by a number denoting the specific week of a calendar year is on the Wednesday of the week specifically denoted in the ticker symbol. If that Wednesday or the Friday that is 30 days following that Wednesday is a CBOE holiday, the Final Settlement Date for the contract shall be on the business day that is 30 days prior to the CBOE business day immediately preceding that Wednesday.
